Dance has been called the "mother of the arts." It encourages the human spirit to articulate its intense and unspoken language as it seeks to convey the landscape of human dream and drama.

If it is true that dance has a lesson to offer, then Lisa Strassberg is its extraordinary teacher.

Lisa was a professional off-Broadway dancer who performed in numerous theatre, dance, and musical productions after many years of technical training in a variety of dance forms. After her return to a Torah lifestyle, she has helped others appreciate the power of creative expression by founding Studio 613, a center for instruction in the performing arts which serves the Orthodox women of Rockland County.

Female audiences thrill to her ability to entertain and elevate them with her tasteful and impressive movements. Lisa's Baltimore debut will feature a soul-stirring performance of drama, song, and dance, focusing on her personal search for truth and beauty.
